Symptom tracker

It's important to tell your care team about any symptoms you experience. Use this tracker to record them throughout treatment.

You already have a lot to deal with, and living with lung cancer has its own challenges as well. Any treatment can come with certain symptoms.

Some symptoms may be prevented or reduced by treating them before they happen. Your care team can help you to feel your best during treatment.

Bring this tracker with you to your doctor appointments and use it to guide your discussions with your care team.

Date	Symptom Description

TIP

Here's a helpful way to bring up symptoms to your care team: "Since [insert date], I've had [insert symptom], and it's been a [insert number 1-5] on a scale of 1 to 5."

Symptom Rating Scale

Use these numbers to help rate how serious each symptom is, based on how it affects your daily life.

1 – Just noticeable

2 – Annoying, but can still do daily activities

3 – Uncomfortable, can't do some daily activities

4 – Very uncomfortable, hard to do any activities

5 – Unbearable, not able to do daily activities

Treatment checklist

Here are some tips to help you prepare for your injection appointments.

Drink plenty of water the day before and have a good breakfast on the day of your injection.

Injections last about 5 minutes, but you may be in the office for longer, so make sure you've set aside enough time for your appointment. Ask your care team about how long your appointment will be.

Ask the office if it's okay to bring a drink and snack with you in case you get hungry before or after your injection.

Consider setting up transportation to and from the treatment center. You may receive medicines before your injection that can make you drowsy. If you need help setting up a ride, reach out to your family and friends.

If you have any other questions about your treatment, ask your care team.

Treatment checklist

Here are some tips to help you prepare for your injection appointments.

Wear loose clothes for comfort and so your care team can easily reach the injection area of your body.

Bring a book, game, puzzle, music, or other entertainment to help pass the time.

Pay close attention to how you feel during an injection, and make sure to tell your care team if you experience any discomfort. They know how to help.

Your care team will give you allergy medicine, a fever reducer, and a steroid to help reduce the risks of serious side effects from the injection.

Notes

Use these pages to write down anything that will help you stay organized or feel better. Consider writing down questions you have for your care team, journaling about how you're feeling, or making "to do" lists. You can also use this space to take notes during your doctor's appointments.
